PREFACE

The Mississippi Early Learning Standards for Classrooms Serving Four-Year-Old Children is organized according to the following areas: English Language Arts (ELA), Mathematics, Approaches to Learning, Social and Emotional Development, Science, Physical Development, Creative Expression, and Social Studies.

The English Language Arts and Mathematics Standards were developed to correlate to the Common Core State Standards (CCSS) for Mathematics and the CCSS for English Language Arts (ELA). The Approaches to Learning, Social and Emotional Development, Science, Physical Development, Creative Expression and Social Studies Standards were developed based on National Standards for Early Childhood Education.

The early childhood classroom does not limit its focus on cognitive development (literacy, mathematics, science and social studies) but provides children with learning opportunities that address a wide variety of developmental domains to support the needs of the whole child. Education and brain research conducted over the past few decades supports a play-based classroom environment for four-year-olds that promotes engagement and interaction, as well as, social, emotional, and physical development in children. Young children learn best when classroom environments support the following:

Young children learn best when they are actively engaged with relevant, meaningful materials. Early childcare and education teachers facilitate learning by carefully selecting materials and activities that give children opportunities to explore, question, reason, and experiment in order to develop an understanding of the world around them.

Young children learn best through social interaction. It is essential that young children are given the opportunity to interact with adults and peers in a respectful environment where their feelings and ideas are valued. Social and emotional development has been shown to have a direct impact on academic achievement and must be included in the early childhood classroom curriculum in purposeful ways. Children learn how to function within society by actively engaging socially in play which encourages interaction, negotiation, sharing, and turn-taking.

Young children learn best when their emotional needs are met. Children develop the ability to appropriately express emotions by practicing skills in social contexts. All emotions, either positive or negative, must be acknowledged and respected. Teachers must provide respectful guidance when children struggle with difficult emotions such as anger, frustration, or sadness.

Young children learn best when their physical development is supported. In order to develop fine motor skills, the learning environment for young children must include daily experimentation with a variety of materials, tools, and resources designed to facilitate the development of fine motor ability. Gross motor skill development must also include movement activities, both teacher-directed and child-chosen, within the classroom and must not be limited to outdoor play activities.

COMMON CORE STATE STANDARDS FOR ENGLISH LANGUAGE ARTS OVERVIEW

The Common Core State Standards (CCSS) for English Language Arts & Literacy in History/Social Studies, Science, and Technical Subjects is the culmination of an extended, broad-based effort to fulfill the charge issued by the states to create the next generation of K-12 standards in order to help ensure that all students are college and career ready in literacy no later than the end of high school.

The CCSS for English Language Arts (ELA) are divided by Reading, Writing, Speaking and Listening, and Language Strands based on the College and Career Readiness (CCR) Anchor Standards that are identical across all grade levels. The Mississippi Early Learning Standards for Classrooms Serving Four-year-old Children were developed to correlate to the CCSS and follow the CCR anchor standards in each strand. Each standard for four-year-olds corresponds to the same-numbered CCR anchor standard. In some cases, there will not be a developmentally appropriate standard for a CCR anchor standard.

The standards on the following pages define what four-year-old children should understand and be able to do. They correspond to the College and Career Readiness (CCR) Anchor Standards for Reading as indicated below. Please note that the Standards for Reading are divided into three components: Literature, Informational Text, and Foundational Skills. In some cases, there will not be a developmentally appropriate standard for a CCR anchor standard.

Common Core State Standards for Mathematics Overview

The Common Core State Standards (CCSS) for Mathematics were developed in order to help ensure that all students are college and career ready in mathematics no later than the end of high school. The CCSS for Mathematics is organized by standards, clusters, and domains. Standards define what students should understand and be able to do. Clusters are groups of related standards. Note that standards from different clusters may sometimes be closely related, because mathematics is a connected subject. Domains are larger groups of related standards. Standards from different domains may sometimes be closely related.

The standards on the following pages define what four-year-old children should understand and be able to do. The standards are organized according to the CCSS for Mathematics domains.

APPROACHES TO LEARNING, SOCIAL AND EMOTIONAL DEVELOPMENT, SCIENCE, PHYSICAL DEVELOPMENT, CREATIVE EXPRESSION, AND SOCIAL STUDIES

OVERVIEW

The standards on the following pages are organized into six content areas: Approaches to Learning, Social and Emotional Development, Science, Physical Development, Creative Expression, and Social Studies.

Each content area is organized into domains, anchor standards, and performance standards. The content area describes the subject or matter within that field of study and pertains to a specific knowledge base (e.g., science) or group of skills (e.g., physical development). The domains within each content area represent categories of the particular content area (e.g., earth science as a domain of science). The anchor standards within each domain are general standards that represent what children should know or be able to do. The performance standards are numbered standards and represent measurable skills that children should be able to master by the end of the school year.

An example of the content organization is provided on the next page.
